Sachverhalt

possibility of returning used batteries free of charge at the point of sale and about the meaning of the symbols for batteries subject to mandatory labelling.

If this information is not given, not given correctly, not given completely or not given in the prescribed manner, this is considered an administrative offense and can be punished with a fine. The same applies to the failure to take back used batteries and hand them over to the manufacturer.

Dealers of vehicle starter batteries can also issue a deposit stamp when collecting the deposit and link the deposit refund to the return of this stamp. The deposit is not collected if the starter battery is installed in a vehicle and sold or passed on to the end consumer. If a deposit is not collected or not refunded or not refunded on time, this is also considered an administrative offense and is punishable by a fine.

Notes (special features)

Dealers can register as a collection point with the Joint Battery Return System (GRS).
