Sachverhalt

Rhineland-Palatinate by wolves is being supported by the state government with funding measures. The same applies to the lynx - here the recolonization is actively supported by a reintroduction project in the Palatinate Forest.

Both species live almost exclusively on wild animals such as deer and wild boar. However, it cannot be ruled out that they may also prey on farm animals such as sheep or goats on pasture or fallow deer in enclosures, especially if these are not adequately protected by fences or livestock guarding dogs.

If you are affected by this, you can apply for compensation under certain conditions.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

A written application is required.

Voraussetzungen

The prerequisite for crack compensation is a crack report by the KLUWO. In designated prevention areas and buffer zones to prevention areas, adequate herd protection using (electric) fences and/or livestock guarding dogs is also a prerequisite for compensation.

Westerwald prevention area: Altenkirchen, Westerwald and Neuwied districts as well as the city of Koblenz and parts of the Mayen-Koblenz and Rhine-Lahn districts.

Eifel buffer zone: municipalities of Adenau, Gerolstein, Prüm

Characteristics for determining cracks caused by animals can be found below:

Kosten

There are no fees.

Verfahrensablauf

Please report the livestock crack to the hotline or by e-mail to the responsible office. An on-site inspection will then be carried out and a crack report drawn up. This is free of charge for you. For this it is important that the killed farm animal has not yet been disposed of. Leave the killed animal in place and secure it with a
