Teaser	Two people who wish to marry each other are married in a civil marriage ceremony. The marriage ceremony takes place in a place designated (prescribed) for this purpose by the competent authority.
Volltext	In German law, a civil marriage ceremony is essential for the establishment of a marriage. When examining the so-called capacity to marry of foreign spouses (certificate of capacity to marry from the home country), it is important to determine whether there are any legal obstacles to marriage under the respective home country law of the foreign partner. This examination is intended to prevent a marriage being entered into in Germany that would be invalid, annulable or void in the home country of the spouses.

The marriage ceremony should be conducted in a dignified manner appropriate to the significance of the marriage. The witnesses to the marriage are no longer mandatory under German law, but can still be involved.

The marriage ceremony takes place in a place designated (prescribed) for this purpose by the competent authority (registry office).
