Teaser	Dying people or their relatives who need support can contact an outpatient hospice service. If the outpatient care and support are not sufficient, the care in an inpatient hospice is possible.
Volltext	Outpatient hospice services
	Dying people or their relatives who need support can contact an outpatient hospice service.,
	In outpatient hospice work, volunteers of the hospice services accompany seriously ill and dying people and their relatives. Depending on your needs, you will regularly come to your house for a few hours - also as a supplement to an outpatient care service. The staff of the hospice services also accompany you in old people's and care facilities, in facilities for the disabled and in the hospital. Outpatient hospice services are financed by subsidies from the health insurance companies and donations. The accompaniment of those affected and their relatives is free of charge.
	Inpatient hospice services
	Under certain conditions, you can take advantage of an inpatient or semi-inpatient service in hospices. This includes palliative care and nursing care. Guest rooms are usually available for your relatives.
	The costs of care in hospices are covered to 95 percent by the respective health and care insurance. 5 percent of the costs are provided by donations. An own contribution does not be incurred.
