Teaser	If your (building) project deviates from building regulations, you must apply for approval of the deviation. This also applies to deviations from regulations that are not examined in the building permit procedure.
Volltext	Before submitting a building application, a written decision on individual questions of the building project (preliminary building decision) can be applied for with a preliminary building application. As an anticipated part of the building permit, a positive preliminary building decision is binding for the subsequent building permit procedure. A preliminary building application is generally useful if it is unclear whether a property can be built on at all under the applicable building planning law. A preliminary building inquiry can save financial expenditure, as not all of the building documents required for planning permission are necessary. In addition, the preliminary building permit provides certainty about the buildability of a property at an early
