Teaser	If you wish to import vertebrate animals from a third country for animal testing purposes, you will require a permit.
Volltext	If you wish to import vertebrate animals from third countries (non-EU states) in order to use them in animal experiments or their organs or tissues for scientific or non-scientific purposes, you must apply for an import permit. A permit is not required for farm animals and fish (except zebrafish). Farm animals include horses, cattle, pigs, sheep, goats, chickens, pigeons, turkeys, ducks and geese. The importer is the person who applies for a corresponding permit from the competent authority. Responsibility is determined by the applicant's registered office. If the applicant is not domiciled in Germany, the domestic place of destination (place of intended use) is decisive for determining the competent authority.
