The official certification of signatures is used to check identity. The competent authority may certify signatures if:

- the signed document is required for submission to a German authority or other body to which the signed document is to be submitted on the basis of a legal provision, and
- the signature is made in the presence of the certifying employee.

Signatures may not be officially certified if:

- they require public certification by a notary (§ 129 of the German Civil Code (BGB)), e.g.
 - certification of signatures under contracts or declarations in the field of family and inheritance law;
 - in matters relating to associations and commercial registers;
- they are submitted without accompanying text (blank signatures),
- the document submitted is not required for submission to an authority or other body to which the signed document is to be submitted on the basis of a legal provision (e.g. so-called "Reich citizen declarations and documents") or is refused to read through,
- documents are written in a foreign language.
