Teaser	Would you like to employ people to work from home for the first time? You can submit the required advance notification to the authorities here.
Volltext	Companies that assign home-based work for the first time must inform the competent authority in advance. This also applies if only irregular or minor activities are planned. Home-based work includes, for example, product testing or translation work. The basis for this is the Home Work Act (HAG). It protects people who work in their own home or in a place of business of their own choosing for companies or intermediaries. The law is intended to prevent discrimination compared to conventional workplaces. The protective regulations for people working from home are non-negotiable. Individual agreements that violate them are invalid. Companies are bound by labor law and collective bargaining agreements when it comes to remuneration for working from home.
