Teaser	If a foster child's health insurance cover is not sufficient for necessary measures, the youth welfare office may be able to cover the necessary co-payments or own contributions.
Volltext	Children and young people under the age of 18 who have statutory health insurance are exempt from co-payments for prescription medicines, bandages and aids (with the exception of travel costs). Any additional co-payments and co-payments for health care services or health insurance for foster children in full-time care are generally covered by the public youth welfare organization. However, not all medical services can be covered. Certain services are not covered by statutory health insurance. This applies in particular to measures that are not medically necessary or are more cosmetic in nature. Such measures are not covered by health insurance.

They are also not covered within the scope of health assistance in accordance with § 40 SGB VIII. The youth welfare office will therefore first check whether and to what extent it is allowed to cover the costs of a co-payment or a personal contribution as part of health assistance.
