Teaser	If you operate a commercial company in Germany, you are generally subject to trade tax.
Volltext	Do you run a company (business) in Germany and generate a commercial income of more than EUR 24,500 per year? Then you are obliged to submit a trade tax return to your tax office. In it, you explain how high your business income was in the past calendar year (survey period). You submit a trade tax return for each collection period in which you operated your business (annually). You must submit the declaration electronically, for example via www. Elster.de. In doing so, you declare further additions or reductions based on your profit or loss (simplified: income minus expenses). In addition, you indicate in which municipality you operate your business. The tax office determines the trade tax assessment amount and announces it by notice. The trade tax assessment amount is determined by the tax office by multiplying the trade income by the tax assessment figure of 3.5 percent. This measurement amount is the basis for the amount of trade tax. The tax office informs the municipality in which you operate your business about the trade tax assessment amount.

The municipality will send you a notice of the trade tax to be paid by you or reimbursed to you by the municipality. The municipality calculates the trade tax from the trade tax assessment amount of the tax office multiplied by the trade tax rate of the municipality. Each municipality determines its own rate.

With the trade tax notice, the municipality also decides on the advance payments of trade tax to be paid by you in the future for the subsequent collection period.

You pay the amounts specified in the notice of trade tax and/or advance payments for trade tax to the municipality on the date specified therein.
