Sachverhalt

appraisal committees for land values receive all contracts by which ownership of a property is to be transferred for a fee. The land purchase contracts are transmitted by the notaries who certify them. The contents of these contracts are recorded and stored in databases (purchase price collections) in compliance with data protection regulations. This data, which is based on purchase prices actually paid, is evaluated by the appraisal committees to derive prices, sales and other important data from the real estate market. Personal data is not stored and therefore cannot be evaluated.

All real estate market data derived by the appraisal committees from the purchase price collection are generally available on the Internet. Property market data is equally helpful if you are active in professional real estate valuation as well as for your private concerns if you need a value orientation for a property. Overall, this makes a significant contribution to transparency in the real estate market with official quality.

If certain requirements are met, an expert committee or its office will also provide information from the purchase price collection.

The property market data as well as standard land values are provided free of charge on the Real Estate Market Lower Saxony page. Market value appraisals can be applied for at the respective expert committee for a fee.

Note on the appraisal committees for property values:

The expert committees are responsible for specific regions in Lower Saxony defined by the state; the Upper Expert Committee is responsible for the entire national territory. The committees are made up of chairpersons and honorary members. The presiding members are members of the surveying and cadastral administration, honorary members are experts from the broad field of the real estate industry, e.g. from the field of architecture, civil engineering, agriculture, finance or brokerage.
