Teaser	The Gymnasium is a type of general education system. In principle, it covers grades 5 to 13, but can also be run without grades 11 to 13 (upper secondary level – gymnasiale Oberstufe).
Volltext	The Gymnasium provides its students with a broad and in-depth general education and enables them to acquire the general ability to study. It strengthens independent learning and scientific propaedeutic work. According to their abilities and inclinations, the Gymnasium enables its students to focus individually and enables them to continue their education at a university, but also in relation to their profession, in accordance with their qualifications. Depending on the decision of the school, instruction in grades 5 to 10 consists of compulsory and optional instruction or of compulsory instruction, compulsory elective instruction and optional instruction. A second foreign language must be learned from the 6th grade. Special subject-related teaching focuses can be offered in grades 8 to 10. Successful attendance of the 10th grade entitles the holder to enter the introductory phase of the upper secondary school (11th grade). In the case of leaving school, all lower secondary education qualifications can be obtained on the basis of the performance achieved in grade 10.

The gymnasiale Oberstufe is divided into a one-year introductory phase (11th grade) and a two-year qualification phase (12th and 13th grade), it ends with the Abitur examination after 13 school years.

Upon successful participation in the Abitur examination, the general higher education entrance qualification is acquired. This entitles the holder to take up any degree programme at a university, college and university of applied sciences, without prejudice to any university's own admission procedures and admission requirements.

In the event of premature departure (at the earliest at the end of the first year of the qualification phase) or failure to pass the Abitur examination, the school part of the Fachhochschulreife can be acquired, provided that the minimum conditions are met. The school-based part of the Fachhochschulreife leads in conjunction with a job-related part to the general Fachhochschulreife. This entitles the holder to study at all universities of applied sciences, at corresponding integrated courses of study at comprehensive universities and, if necessary, to a limited extent after individual admission procedures also at corresponding Bachelor's degree programmes at some universities.
