Teaser	If you are pregnant or have just given birth, you can make use of the services of a midwife.
Volltext	Women insured under the statutory health insurance scheme are entitled to midwife assistance during pregnancy, during and after childbirth, in addition to their entitlement to medical care. Midwifery assistance includes services during pregnancy and childbirth provided by a state-certified and recognized midwife or maternity nurse. The provision of services is governed by the midwife assistance contract. Midwifery assistance includes • Maternity care and antenatal care services, • Obstetrics, • services during the postpartum period up to 12 weeks after the birth and • other services, such as advice for the mother in the event of breastfeeding difficulties or postnatal gymnastics with group instruction. Midwife assistance can be claimed during pregnancy and up to 12 weeks after delivery (exception: advice for the mother in the event of breastfeeding difficulties or feeding problems for the baby). Midwifery assistance is provided to insured persons as a benefit in kind, i.e. the midwives bill the health insurance companies directly. Only services that are regulated in the midwives' fee schedule can be billed.
