Teaser	To maintain public safety and order in urban areas, municipalities must illuminate public roads to the best of their ability (...) if this is urgently required and others are not obliged to do so under other legal provisions.
Volltext	As lighting obligations of others only exist in individual cases, street lighting is generally provided by the municipalities. In this case, the municipal obligation applies to all public roads located within the built-up area, including through roads of federal highways. However, it is not possible to establish a general rule for the extent and duration of street lighting. The extent of the lighting obligation depends on local requirements and other local conditions, in particular the importance of the respective road for traffic, but also on the size of the municipality and its financial capacity. The location of the respective road in the municipal area also plays a role. Against this background, it may also be possible in individual cases to switch off street lighting by the hour at night. Municipalities must then mark streetlights within built-up areas that are not lit all night with a red ring. The local authorities would be grateful for any reports of defective street lights.
