Volltext	The death of a person must be certified by the registry office in whose jurisdiction they died. Therefore, such a death must be reported to the registry office. Written notification for deaths in a hospital or retirement home In the case of deaths in hospitals, old people's and nursing homes and other institutions, the body responsible for the institution (usually the administration) is obliged to report the death. For this purpose, the administration of the facility will collect data on the deceased and obtain the necessary documents and evidence from the relatives. Nevertheless, it cannot be ruled out that relatives of the deceased or a funeral home commissioned by them will have to appear again. This is particularly necessary if the registry office does not yet have all the data required for the notarization. Verbal notification If no written notification is possible, the death of the person must be reported verbally to the registry office. This is the case, for example, if the death did not take place in an institution (clinic, retirement home, etc.). The following are obliged to notify the registry office Any person who lived with the deceased in the same household. The person in whose home the death occurred. Any other person who was present at the
