responsibility of the administrative districts/municipalities. Reclassification outside the road class of federal and state roads is carried out either by a consensual reclassification agreement between the road authorities involved or by supervisory reclassification. The mutually agreed reclassification agreement must be notified to the road supervisory authority responsible for the future road class, i.e. the government in the case of district roads. The road supervisory authority can object to the mutually agreed reclassification within 2 months (so-called reminder).

If the road authorities involved do not agree on the traffic significance of a road, the responsible road supervisory authority, i.e. the government, decides if the highest road authority involved is a district administrative authority.

For federal roads, state roads and district roads, the supreme road construction authority keeps so-called road directories. All roads are included in the road directories according to their road class. The governments are responsible for examining and forwarding applications from districts and independent municipalities for changes to the road register for district roads to the Supreme Road Construction Authority.
