Teaser	Pupils at secondary schools are intensively prepared for the transition from school to work from year 7 onwards as part of the extended in-depth careers orientation with careers orientation measures (BOM). These measures are funded.
Volltext	At the end of their school years, young people have to make a significant effort in terms of orientation and decision-making. In our dynamic education and employment system, new training courses, courses of study and occupational fields emerge almost daily. The increase in decision-making opportunities on the one hand therefore also places increased demands on the orientation and decision-making skills of young people on the other. For this reason, pupils today need more intensive support in the transition from school to work than they did just a few years ago. Measures carried out as part of the extended in-depth careers guidance at secondary schools can be funded on application.
