be used if it was reserved for this purpose when the vehicle was taken out of service (deregistration).
If the holder and owner of the vehicle are not the same (e.g. in the case of leasing vehicles), the LBV must be informed of who the vehicle is to be registered for.

Make up for due vehicle inspections

If a general inspection, emissions test or safety check was due in the period between deregistration and the application for re-registration of the vehicle, this must be carried out before the vehicle is re-registered.

After a long period of non-operation, an expert opinion is required

If the vehicle and owner data have already been deleted from the central vehicle register (7 years after deregistration) and the data can no longer be verified elsewhere, an expert report from an officially recognized expert is required.

New license plate may be required

If the number plate was not reserved when the vehicle was deregistered, or if another owner is re-registered, a new number plate must be applied for.

Driving with assigned, unsealed license plates

Journeys related to the registration process can also be made with assigned unsealed license plates if covered by insurance. Such trips are trips to carry out the main inspection (TÜV) and to the registration authority. These journeys are restricted to the registration district and the adjacent registration districts.
