The Road Traffic Regulations (StVO) only provide for residents of resident parking areas to be entitled to a parking permit. All other interest groups - which also include companies, institutions, organizations, clubs and social institutions - can only be exempted from the regulations of the StVO in exceptional cases. Since there is generally no legal entitlement, exceptions for this group must always be examined on a case-by-case basis. Anyone who can prove that the vehicle is essential to the business and cannot be parked off the road or on company property can receive an exemption. For this individual decision, the State Transport Authority (LBV) must therefore obtain an overview of the respective operating situation in order to keep the number of people parking in competition with the residents in balance.
