§ 71 paragraph 2 Vocational Training Act (BBiG) §§ 58 ff. Vocational Training Act (BBiG)

Teaser

You complete your retraining with the retraining exam. By passing the final examination, you prove your professional ability to act in a specific profession.

Volltext

Retraining is used for professional reorientation, usually because you can no longer practice your previous job. The retraining takes place on the basis of a recognized training occupation and, just like the vocational training, ends with a final examination, the retraining examination. Retraining exams consist of a written part and a practical or oral part. Both parts of the exam usually take place on different days. The written part of the exam takes place nationwide on a fixed day at the same time. A retraining examination is carried out regionally by the bodies responsible for training in your profession (e.g. Chamber of Industry and Commerce) for all retrainees at the end of the retraining period. Before you can take the retraining exam, you must have completed the retraining. This is two-thirds of the usual duration of training in the respective profession. Since you have concluded a retraining contract with a company or educational institution, your contractual partner has reported this retraining contract to the responsible regional authority (e.g. Chamber of Industry and Commerce). The responsible body therefore knows when you will take your retraining exam. The admission and registration process is started by the responsible office by post or electronically. The regionally responsible office organizes the implementation of the retraining examination in consultation with the honorary examination board. The examination board consists of an employers' representative, employees' representatives and teachers' representatives. He accepts your exam performance and evaluates it. Your retraining relationship ends when the examination board announces the result. If you do not pass the retraining exam, you have the option of repeating the exam twice.
