(including trailer) of more than 3.5 tons, you must apply for an EU license or a national permit. Cross-border road haulage within the EU is the commercial or paid transport of goods in motor vehicles that, including trailers, have a total weight of more than 2.5 tons. Commercial road haulage generally requires a permit. The so-called company traffic, i.e. the transport of goods for the own purposes of a company under certain conditions, does not require a permit. If vehicles with a total weight of more than 3.5 tons are only used throughout Germany, you need a permit for commercial road haulage. For cross-border journeys within the European Union, the European Economic Area (EEA) and Switzerland with vehicles with a total weight of more than 2.5 tons, you need a community license (EU license) and, if necessary, a driver's certificate for nationals of a third country. You can also use the joint license for transports within Germany and the EEA countries ("cabotage traffic"). For commercial road haulage with countries outside the European Economic Area, you need bilateral permits or so-called CEMT permits in addition to the community license for sections of the route in third countries. The permit for commercial road haulage and the community license can be granted for a limited period, with conditions or with requirements. The national permit and also the EU license can be granted for a period of validity of up to 10 years.

Hinweise

There are the following hints: Company transport as road haulage for the company's own purposes does not require a permit under the following conditions: the goods carried must be owned by, sold, bought, hired, hired, manufactured, produced, obtained, processed or repaired by the company. the carriage must serve to deliver the goods to the company, to dispatch them from the company, to move them within the company or for their own use outside the company. the motor vehicles used for the transport must always be driven by the company's own staff. Transport may only be ancillary to the overall activity of the company. If company transport as road freight transport for the company's own purposes does not require a permit, the entrepreneur who operates company transport is obliged to register his company with the Federal Office for Goods Transport before the start of the first transport. The Federal Office for Goods Transport is responsible for issuing bilateral approval or an approval from the European Conference of Transport Ministers (French: Conférence Européenne des Ministres des Transports (CEMT)) for cross-border commercial road haulage and removals traffic in the community of CEMT member states (over 30 countries in Europe). responsible.
