Teaser	Do you have sole custody of your child and need a certificate (negative certificate) about this? Find out more here.
Volltext	If you as the mother are not married to the child's father and no entries have been made in the custody register, you can request a certificate of sole custody (negative certificate). A custody register is kept there for children of parents who are not married to each other. Entries are made in this custody register if: Declarations of care must be made. Based on a final court decision, custody has been transferred in whole or in part jointly. Custody has been completely or partially withdrawn from the mother or transferred to the father due to a final court decision. If no entry has been made in the custody register, you will be issued with a written certificate of sole custody. If entries have been made in the custody register based on a court decision that relate to the distribution of parental custody, you will receive written information that entries have been made in the custody register.
