Teaser	Companies need a license for certain activities when handling animal by-products.
Volltext	All animal-derived residues that are not suitable or intended for human consumption are animal by-products. These should be recycled and disposed of safely in such a way that neither the health of humans and animals nor the environment are endangered. For this purpose, the animal by-products are divided into three risk categories according to the degree of risk they pose to human and animal health, which are to be processed or disposed of differently (Articles 7-10 of Regulation (EC) No. 1069/2009) . A license is required for certain activities involving the handling of animal by-products. If you want to carry out one of the following activities, you need a permit from the competent authority beforehand: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Processing of animal by-products by pressure sterilization, by processing methods according to Article 15 paragraph 1 subparagraph 1 letter b of VO (EG) 1069/2009 or approved alternative methods according to Article 20 VO (EG) 1069/2009</li> <li>• Disposal as waste by incineration of animal by-products and derived products, except in relation to</li> </ul>
