Sachverhalt

The guardianship does not restrict parental custody. The guardian represents the child in the process of establishing paternity. The guardian can act on behalf of the child in and out of court. Once legal paternity has been established, the guardian can also clarify questions of maintenance.

Specifically, the guardian can do the following:

- Request the father to acknowledge paternity and record the necessary documents
- Arrange for the paternity to be clarified in court
- Calculating your child's maintenance entitlement
- Regular review of the maintenance claim
- Recording a deed of maintenance
- Judicial enforcement of the maintenance claim
- Collection and monitoring of maintenance payments
- Determining the whereabouts and employer of the parent liable for maintenance
