Teaser	Children over the age of 14 can revoke their adoption if the adoption has not yet been decided by a court. This revocation must be publicly notarized.
Volltext	In principle, the child and the legal representatives (usually the mother and father) must agree to an adoption. If the children are under the age of 14, only the legal representatives can consent (usually the mother and father). If the child is older than 14, the child must also consent to the adoption. If a court has not yet ruled on the adoption, a child aged 14 or older can revoke the adoption. This is called a revocation of consent to the adoption. This revocation is also possible if the legal representative has consented to the adoption and the child later turns 14. However, this is only possible if the adoption has not yet been finalized (i.e. no court has yet ruled on the adoption). The child can revoke the adoption on their own. It does not need permission to do so. It does not matter why the child wants to revoke the adoption. A form is prescribed for the revocation. The revocation must be "publicly notarized". The child can do this at a youth welfare office or at a notary's office. The notarization does not cost any money at the youth welfare office. At a notary's office, notarization costs money.

Erforderliche Unterlagen	No documents required.
Voraussetzungen	• The legal representative or the child himself, who is at least 14 years old, has previously consented to the adoption in the prescribed form. • The child is at least 14 years old and has legal capacity. • A court has not yet ruled on the adoption.
Kosten
Verfahrensablauf	• An appointment should be made before notarization. • The legal consequences must be explained to the child before notarization. This is explained by the youth welfare office or the notary. • The revocation is publicly notarized • The document is sent to the family court. • The revocation of consent becomes effective as soon as the document has been received by the family court. • If the deed is received by the family court before it has made a final decision on the adoption, the adoption can no longer take place.
