Teaser	Are you adopted and looking for your family of origin? Then you can seek advice from your local youth welfare office or adoption agency. Members of the family of origin can also receive support in their search for the whereabouts of an adopted child.
Volltext	Adopted children have a right to know about their own parentage. The adoptive parents can also inspect the files until the child reaches the age of majority. The adoption agency that arranged the adoption accompanies the inspection of the files in all cases. The information on the origin and life story of the adoptee is accessible. This means that it is not possible to read through the entire file. The files on adoption placements are kept for 100 years from the birth of the child. The adoption files are kept by the youth welfare office that arranged the adoption. Adoptive children and their families are also accompanied by specialists from the adoption agency in their search for the birth parents. If you wish, you can also receive advice anonymously.
